St. Paul's Cathedral—The Nave and Chancel. The Cathedral of St. Paul, London, is a great triumph of architecture—the work of one mind, that of Sir Christopher Wren, one master mason, and completed under one Bishop. First stone laid June 21st, 1675, and the Choir was opened for service Dec. 2nd, 1697. The Reredos was completed in 1888, and the iron gates shown in the picture were designed by Tijou, and came from the now extinct furnaces of the Sussex Weald. The picture on the right-hand wall is by the celebrated artist, G. F. Watts, R.A.

Dear Mr. N.

Sunday night.

Just returned from Church. Went
wh. Sands yesterday as you thought. had a splendid time. Took Pop. his first sea voyage. He was greatly interested in the people's feet over there, could not understand the waves. Three weddings. By Jove what a prolific family you are.
make good use of your time because it is short this holiday. Our best wishes to Mrs. F.
to our both. Yours truly
J. M. B.

Miss Weymouth.
